Ricci v. DeStefano is a case concerning white firefighters in New Haven, Connecticut, who, after they had passed an exam designed to determine eligibility for promotion were denied promotion because no African-American firefighters scored high enough on the exam to be considered for promotion. The city tossed out the results, claiming “disparate impact,” and the white firefighters sued, going all the way to the United States Supreme Court.

74

21. Strategic Organizational Diversity: A Model?, Frederick Tesch and Frederick Maidment, The International Journal of Diversity in Organizations, Communities and Nations, vol. 8, no. 6, 2009

89

Part A. Outsourcing and Offshoring

- 35. The Real Cost of Offshoring, Michael Mandel and Pete Engardio, BusinessWeek, June 18, 2007

Nobody knows what offshoring is really costing the United States, because the methods of accounting that are currently in place are not adequate for the task. The fact is that it is costing more than is being reported and as a result, the national income figures of growth, individual real income, and other measures are not accurate, and it is getting worse.

123

Part B. Managing International Human Resources

- 36. America's Other Immigration Crisis, Vivek Wadhwa, The American, July/August 2008

There is a lot of talk about illegal immigration but there is another immigration crisis. This is the crisis facing American industry as it attempts to compete for global talent through the maze of the American immigration system. 131

38. Multiple Choice , Lori Chordas, Best's Review , March 2009 A one-size-fits-all approach to benefits is not going to work for a company with employees in different countries. 39. Roots of Insecurity: Why American Workers and Others Are Losing Out , Horst Brand, Dissent Magazine , Winter 2007 Why do American workers feel so insecure? There are many reasons for this, which are explored here.	140
