

Chapter 25 What Then Shall We Do?

This chapter discusses the actions that individuals and organized groups can take to affect change in environmental decisions. It is imperative to be familiar with NGOs and their missions. Remember to start locally, then think globally.

The material also discusses the importance of environmental education with regard to citizen science and environmental literacy. Informed citizens make good decisions. The chapter revisits the key concept of the emphasis on sustainability.