
Further Readings for Ch. 23

- Castro, P., and Huber, M. 2002. Marine biology. 4th ed. St. Louis: Mosby-Year Book, Inc. This introductory text is designed to provide a stimulating overview of marine biology.
- Huddler, G. W. 2000. Magical mushrooms, mischievous molds. Princeton, New Jersey: Princeton University Press. This introductory text discusses basic mycology and the impact of fungi on human life and history.
- Lim, D. 1998. Microbiology. 2d ed. Dubuque, Iowa: WCB/McGraw-Hill. This introductory text shows how microorganisms relate to one another and to other organisms; includes new material in evolution and biodiversity.
- Madigan, M. T., and Mairs, B. L. April 1997. Extremophiles. Scientific American 276(4):86. Certain microorganisms can withstand extreme environments.
- Margulis, L., et al. 1999. Diversity of life: the illustrated guide to the five kingdoms. Boston: Jones & Bartlett. Introduces the kingdoms of organisms.
- Matthews, B. E. 1998. An introduction to parasitology. Cambridge, United Kingdom: Cambridge University Press. This introductory undergraduate text provides a concise overview of parasite biology.
- Moore, R., Clark, W. D., et al. 1998. Botany. 2d ed. Dubuque, Iowa: WCB/McGraw-Hill. This introductory botany text stresses the importance of plants and the process of science.
- Nester, E. W., Roberts, C. E., et al. 2001. Microbiology: A human perspective. 3rd ed. Dubuque, Iowa: WCB/McGraw-Hill. This introductory text relates basic microbiology to human health.